DETAIL ACTION

Notice to Applicant(s)

1. This application has been examined. Claims 1-3 are pending.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

2. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:
3. The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.
4. As per claim 1, the body in this claim refers to figure 2 of the application, which the preamble should be "The Map response subsystem".
5. As per claim 3, the "remote access system operatively coupled to the request handler" is unclear as from the figure 1, "the remote access system" 12 is the whole system and the "request handler" is subset of the map response subsystem 14. Clarification and/or correction are requested.
6. The remaining claims, not specifically mentioned, are rejected for incorporating the defects from their respective parent claims by dependency.
7. The following rejections are based on the examiner's best interpretation of the claims in light of the 35 U.S.C. 112 errors noted above.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

8. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

9. Claims 1 and 3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Chou (6,327,533) in view of Vaughn (5,485,161).

10. With respect to claim 1, Chou discloses the claimed invention which includes a request handler module configured to manage requests between the object location server and at least one of the user (see figure 1, item 502), a map generator for generating the graphical map data for the longitude and latitude of the object (see figure 4, item 505 and column 10, lines 57 to column 11, line 44), and Geographic Information System for providing more information to the user about road condition, route information or object data (see column 10,12, lines 1-21).

11. Chou does not disclose the longitude and latitude data are translated into the street address data. However, such means for converting the longitude and latitude data into the street address data is well known at the time the invention was made and is shown in at least figure 3 and the related text of the Vaughn reference. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to incorporate the teaching of Vaughn into the system of Chou in order to provide the system with the enhanced capability of provide further information, i.e. the street address data from the known input latitude and longitude data, when needed.

12. With respect to claim 3, it is obvious that the server is configured to communicate with a host (base device) as shown in at last figure 8 of the Chou reference.

13. Claim 2 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Chou and Vaughn as applied to claims above, and further in view of Machii et al. (6,324,467).

Art Unit: 3661

14. Chou and Vaughn disclose the claimed invention as discussed above except for the map system further provide driving direction from a source address location to a destination address location. However, the system for provide the driving direction from a source location to a destination location from the server is well known in the art and is suggested in at least the Machii et al. reference in at least the abstract and figure 2. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to incorporate the teaching of Machii et al. into the systems of Chou and Vaughn by entering the coordinate positions for both the source and destination location, which are converted into the address data, and from there, the driving direction is provided from the server.

Conclusion

15. All claims are rejected.
